

STORY OF THE WRONG BABY WHO LOOKED JUST LIKE HIS FATHER

It's not only a wise child that knows his own father, but it's a very observing father that knows his own child, especially when that child is removed from its environment and dressed in its differentiating clothing. Of course, every father knows without looking that his boy, even at four months of age, is distinctly more engaging and beautiful to behold than any other boy at the same age. But wherein the difference lies is the vital question, and a recent local occurrence would tend to prove the theory—held so long by cynics of the old maid and bachelor class—that all babies are essentially alike, unless identified by differences of clothing, etc., etc.

A well-known physician is the happy father of the handsome but precocious old baby he ever saw, and with due parental pride he asked his better half to have a likeness of the child taken to prove his oft reiterated statement. The necessary steps were taken and the day set by the photographer for viewing the proofs of the infant prodigy. The family could hardly wait to see the picture of the cherub, and when the morning finally arrived for the test the anxious mother telephoned the photographer's office, admonishing him to return to his luncheon with the photographs, or not at all.

The happy father strode, therefore, into the studio of Munroe on Second South street and asked for the proofs of his baby's pictures. The obliging young lady at the desk brought out a bunch of proofs and said:

"This is your baby, isn't it?"

The happy father replied briefly, as was his wont, but decidedly in the affirmative, and departed, bearing the precious likenesses, or earnest thereof.

Arriving at the home of the cherub the father produced the photographs and package, and the anxious relatives and the fully augmented household drew near to behold with rapture the babe's likeness.

The first look on the face of the mother was one of bitter disappointment.

"Why his eyes are too small."

"He doesn't look wide awake."

"He's not half so good looking as we thought he was."

These were a few of the ejaculations of the assembled relatives, and one went so far as to tell the mother that she had not posed the baby properly, his head had not been held correctly, his sunny smile had not been caught, etc., etc.

The father alone was pleased. He alone saw in the proofs submitted a faithful likeness of his darling child.

"Now, look at it this way," he said. "See, it is a pretty good picture, considering that the child is only four months old. He'll make a better picture when he is a little older, but that is a very good picture of him."

Further advantages were pointed out, and the striking resemblance between the baby picture and the father himself were particularly noted, the resemblance (often the subject of comment by friends and relatives) being especially gratifying to the father.

Only one thought came to the sorrowing mother, and that was the fact that she had been more concerned over her baby than his appearance warranted. She brooded on this, and as she brooded she returned to take another gaze at the proofs, leaving the luncheon table for a glance at them by herself.

Suddenly the housewife was startled by wild peals of hysterical laughter, and when they reached the mother she could do nothing but point to a small, fancy pin embedded in the numerous draperies of the baby picture, where never had reposed a fancy pin on her baby. Closer observation disclosed many discrepancies of the photograph and that worn by the cherub when he had posed, and in short the entire family shortly discovered that a baby had been grieved over the wrong baby.

CADETS RECEIVE COLORS BEATEN WITH A CHICKEN

Formal Presentation of Faculty's Gift Made at Battalion Drill.

New Battalion colors were presented to the High school cadet corps yesterday by the faculty of the school. The event was made the occasion for quite an elaborate formation of the corps on the east side of the school building just after the close of the school session. Almost the entire school as well as many outsiders were present at the ceremony.

The battalion was assembled in close order with the color company at the front. Miss Mayne, who was instrumental in starting the movement among the teachers, made the presentation. She spoke briefly on the organization and its great improvement since its first year, which was at the time when she was attending the High school herself. She ended by handing the colors over to the acting junior color sergeant, Pandleton.

The colors were received by the battalion at present arms, while the field music played to the colors. Lester Mureton, the senior captain, then made a short talk in behalf of the corps, accepting the generous gift and thanking the faculty for its interest.

Battalion parade was then held. This turned out to be the best of the year. The band was out and played two new marches.

The next important drill will be the review by Governor Cutler and his staff on Friday next. It will be in full dress.

Mrs. Maud Sermom Says Her Husband Used Unique Weapon in Chastising Her.

Being pounded on the head with a defunct chicken by an irate husband does not seem to be the sort of treatment Mrs. Maud A. Sermom likes, for yesterday she filed an action for divorce against J. A. Sermom making this allegation. The family resides at 1888 South Tenth East street where the chicken incident is said to have taken place.

The trouble complained of came four months after the marriage, which occurred at Farmington, August 18, 1900.

While cleaning the chicken for the Christmas dinner of 1900 the husband, she asserts, became suddenly very angry and grasping her by the arms, struck her with the fowl. He then smeared her face with the refuse. He also beat her with his fists. They have not lived together since. Mrs. Sermom asks for alimony and the custody of the child.

TRACKS ARE TOO HIGH.

Council Committee Examines Condition of First South Street.

The Council street committee, led by Chairman Carter and accompanied by Chief Engineer Kelsey, yesterday afternoon to examine the condition of the railroad crossing there. The tracks are about four feet above the street line, and because of this the property owners on either side have complained that it is impossible for heavy teams to cross. Mr. Ashten asserted that the tracks were laid several years ago in accordance with a grade made by former City Engineer Kelsey, but that owing to some misunderstanding the grade then made was never approved by the council, and that a new grade being subsequently made threw the tracks up above the street. He said that the matter could be adjusted and the committee decided to leave it to him and Mr. Kelsey to settle.

BURGULARS ENTER HOME OF OFFICER'S MOTHER

He evidently thought the family was not at home, as the house was dark, but hearing voices in another part of the house, he left without taking anything. Mrs. Smith's daughter saw the man leaving the house and reported the incident to her brother, the desk sergeant.
